Preface

After retiring in April 2002, I used my work skills to collect, organize, and edit the rich and colorful life experiences of the Fang family in Lijiang into a collection. It is richly illustrated and consists of ten volumes.

Gentle breezes and sweet rain nourish the heart

A garden full of peach and plum blossoms in spring

Today, at the age of eighty-five, I still dedicate myself to organizing and compiling photos and materials of my deceased relatives, to remember them. Facing the smiling faces of my living relatives, I feel a deep sense of respect! May these images be eternally recorded in the annals of the Fang family history.

The younger generation grows up healthy and strong; the family members are lively and adorable, now grown up, all fulfilling their duties. A fleeting photo, an eternal memory; the deepest affection, the warmest warmth—joy is felt subtly and gradually!

In this world, besides relatives, friends are the ones who rely on each other, support each other through thick and thin, and share joys and sorrows. This expanded "Friends" section looks back on a lifetime's journey, filled with photos of friends: the lively and adorable days of childhood; the vibrant years of youth; the dedicated achievements of adulthood; the shining moments of success—these snapshots vividly capture the most joyful and celebratory moments. Each happy smile becomes a precious record of history!

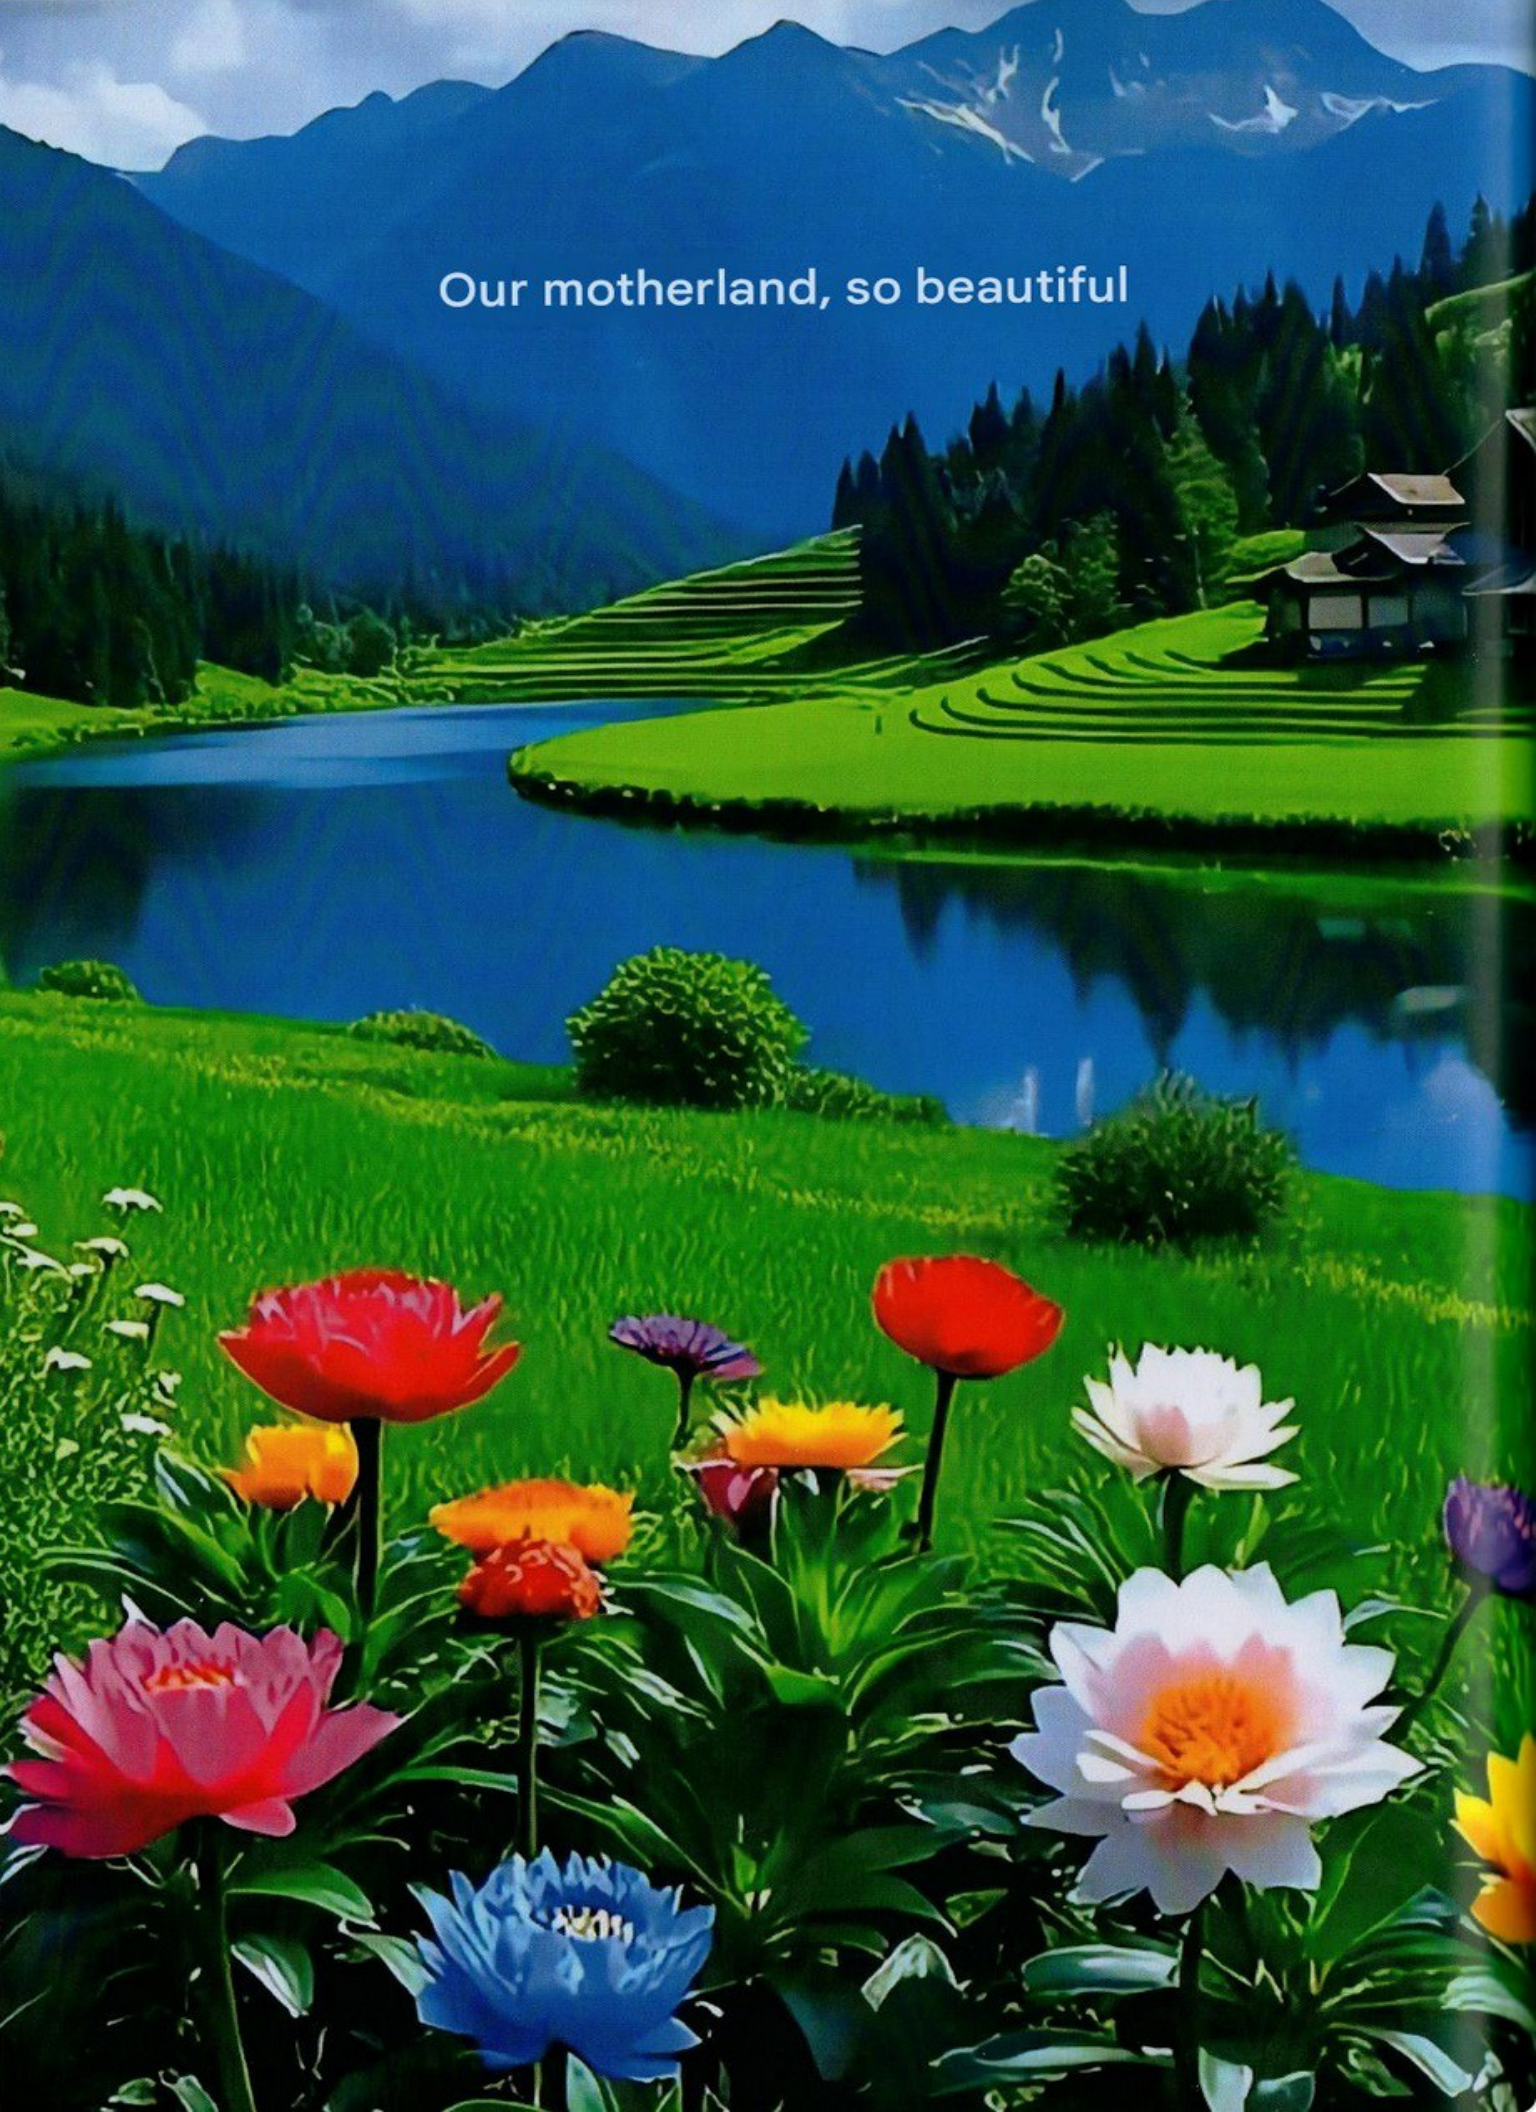

In the blink of an eye, years slip by, impossible to hold back. Heaven and earth are full of love, humanity is full of affection; let us care for each other, and walk hand in hand in health. May the rest of our lives be filled with happiness, and may we find joy even in small sorrows. The sunset's glow is infinitely beautiful; may we spend our remaining years in peace and tranquility.

With a smile, I greet the world, like a gentle spring in the warm sunset!

Our motherland, so beautiful

Relatives

Relatives, social relationships based on blood ties or marriage, are of great significance in human society, forming the basic units of family and society.

The Fang family of Lijiang originated from Anhui. In the fifteenth year of the Hongwu reign of the Ming Dynasty (1383), Fang Yuanzhong followed the army to Yunnan and settled there, becoming one of the first ancestors of the Fang family in Yunnan.

Around 1806, during the mid-Jiaqing period of the Qing Dynasty, Fang Tingfeng, the 15th generation ancestor of the Fang clan in Yunnan, married into the Zhao family in Lijiang from Kunming. He later established his own household and became the first ancestor of the Fang clan in Lijiang. To date (2024), the clan has a history of 218 years. Currently, there are over 150 members of the eighth generation of relatives from outside the clan. Generation after generation, they have inherited the family traditions and precepts, promoted traditional virtues, cared for and relied on each other, illuminated and shone upon one another, accumulated good deeds, and gained insights into life, becoming a source of positive energy for achievement!

Among the members of the Fang family, with the progress of the times, they possess a global perspective and lofty aspirations. They have established themselves in various locations including the United States, Japan, Beijing, Tianjin, Xi'an, Guangdong, Shenzhen, Hoshino, Xichang, Kunming, Qujing, Chuxiong, Dali, and Lijiang, each with their own unique life trajectories and experiences. Yet, throughout these diverse journeys, they have always been dedicated to the cause of serving the country and its people. Each has achieved their own success, truly deserving of the title "Fang family member."

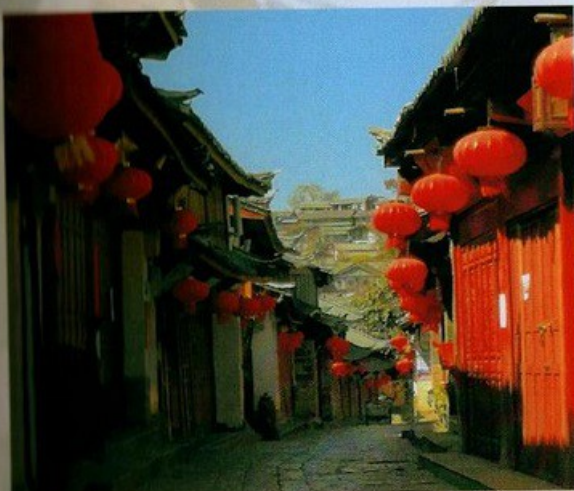

Distance is no barrier to affection; it is the thought that matters. Though we may not always be together, the beautiful memories remain! Looking at fleeting photos of relatives and family, we reminisce about the poetic and picturesque moments we shared. Beautiful years pass, and a deep longing arises spontaneously. The kindness and love of our parents, the nurturing grace they bestowed upon us, are eternally recorded in the affection and sentiments of our relatives and family.

What more can one ask for in this life? Contentment brings happiness and peace of mind. We meet every day on WeChat, sharing our joys and sorrows. May our lives last forever. As long as we remain healthy, we can greet the seasons with smiles.

Visiting Fang Guoyu's former residence

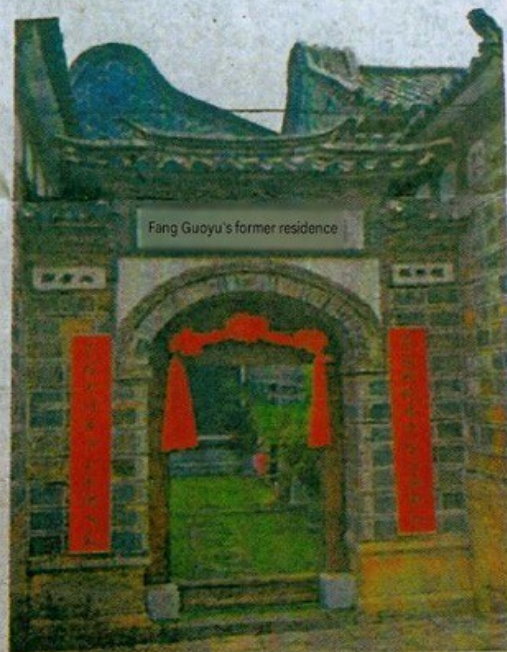

"Qiao Jiang Shu"

When traveling to Lijiang Old Town, a World Cultural Heritage site, besides experiencing the picturesque scenes of "willows by every house and flowing water in every home," the magnificent architecture of the Mu Family Mansion, and the colorful stone slabs worn smooth and shiny by centuries of horses' hooves, there are some often-forgotten yet well worth visiting places, such as key protected residences, caravan stations, and the ruins of old teahouses. Among them, the former residence of the famous historian Fang Guoyu, located in Wenzhi Lane, Wuyi Street, Lijiang Old Town, is a highly representative and culturally rich key protected residence.

Mr. Fang Guoyu is a master who has made significant achievements in the fields of Chinese studies, Naxi culture, the holistic view of the Chinese nation, ethnic minorities in Yunnan, the history of salt marshes, and the relationship between Southwest China and Southeast Asia.

Entering Fang Guoyu's former residence is like stepping into a lecture hall of family precepts and traditions. The Fang family's diligence, unity, emphasis on education, and strict family traditions deeply resonated with me.

Fang Guoyu's former residence is an ancient house with a history of nearly 300 years, divided into upper and lower sections. Standing on the street, the first thing that catches the eye is a fan-shaped arched gate, above which is a white plaque with green characters that reads "Fang Guoyu's Former Residence." Further ahead, the second gate has a plaque that reads "Shigu Di" from the Guangxu period of the Qing Dynasty. The upper and lower courtyards are connected by a small courtyard with a "connected three-room-one-courtyard" structure. Behind the east and west wings of each courtyard are small gardens, forming a self-contained world. The central hall of the two courtyards is connected by a staircase, forming a

A bronze statue of Fang Guoyu. The courtyard is divided into six exhibition rooms: "The Path of Learning," "Family Care," "Scientific Research Achievements," and "Teaching Achievements." It displays more than 200 photographs of Mr. Fang Guoyu from various periods of his life, as well as more than 120 manuscripts, monographs, writing implements, furniture, and other personal belongings.

According to architectural experts, Fang Guoyu's former residence combines the meticulousness and rigor of Hui-style architecture with the grand and imposing style of Naxi architecture, making it a unique architectural masterpiece that integrates Han and Naxi cultures.

People often say that coming to Lijiang without visiting the Old Town is a wasted trip, but I feel that going to the Old Town without visiting Fang Guoyu's former residence is like not having been to the Old Town at all.

Friends ——— Important social figures in one's interpersonal circle. Friends are like-minded people with deep friendships and good relationships.

Friendship is the purest, noblest, and simplest of all. Ordinary feelings are the most romantic, the most steadfast, and the most enduring.

Friendship is everywhere, but true friends are rare to meet, accompanying you and sharing your life.

In this vast world, amidst the hustle and bustle of life, among countless beings, it is a blessing that friends can come together, get to know each other, understand each other, and grow closer. On our different life paths, in the depths of our diverse experiences, to meet and gather with one another is a true stroke of luck.

Friends, let us support each other on this long journey of life. Even if we cannot see each other every day, our hearts will forever be connected by our mutual affection. Is this not a joyful and precious thing?

Only with deepest feelings can one persevere; only with gratitude can one possess. May you and I be incredibly happy today, facing life with a smile, living in joy, and enjoying lifelong health.

Heaven and earth are filled with love, and humanity is full of affection; we care for each other and walk together towards health.

Welcome each day with a smile, stroll in lasting peace and tranquility. Let us calm our minds and let everything take its natural course. Let the meaning of life be paramount, for everyone is a guest in this world. If the heart is young, then age will not age us. Let us live our ideal later years with a youthful and optimistic attitude, and gracefully become young-minded elders through positive mental development.

A full moon rises over a calm body of water, its light reflecting on the surface. The scene is framed by delicate pink cherry blossoms in the foreground, creating a serene and romantic atmosphere.

The bright moon accompanies you for life

The breeze was unintentional, but the bright moon was full of affection.

It's rare to have a girlfriend together

The Fang family, known for producing talented individuals in every generation.

The Fang family of Lijiang, Yunnan, traces its ancestry back to Dashiqiao, Qianshan County, Anqing Prefecture, Anhui Province, and was a prominent local family.

the fifteenth year of the Hongwu reign of the Ming Dynasty (1383), Fang Yuanzhong, a member of the clan, followed the army in battles.

In the

He settled in Yunnan and became one of the first ancestors of the Fang clan.

the mid-Jiaqing period of the Qing Dynasty (circa 1806), Fang Ting, the fifteenth generation ancestor of the Nanfang clan in Yunnan, was born.

During

He married into the Zhao family in Lijiang from Kunming, and later established his own household, thus becoming one of the first ancestors of the Fang family in Lijiang.

The Fang family of Lijiang has been settled in Dayan Town, Lijiang County for 218 years.

By the eighth generation, according to blood relations, there are a total of 153 relatives (including 28 descendants of Fang Baoxian, a sixth-generation descendant of a Chinese American).

Among them are 31 ancestors, 68 brothers, and 54 sisters.

The Fang family of Lijiang, spanning generations, has placed great emphasis on the upbringing and education of its children, cultivating a strong family tradition and values. Many members of the family have achieved remarkable success, dedicating themselves to causes beneficial to the nation and its people.

Pei Gang, the second generation of the Fang family in Lijiang. During the chaotic reigns of the Xianfeng and Tongzhi Emperors of the Qing Dynasty...

He once served as a clerk in the Lijiang Militia Bureau, but almost died in the war. He later went into business.

The third generation, Yu Run, inherited the family business and founded the Chongxinhe Trading Company. The business scope has expanded to Huili, Chengdu, Chongqing and other places in Sichuan. Yu Run is a businessman who values integrity and honesty, and is known as "Fang Gongdao" (meaning "fair and just"), enjoying a high reputation in the local area.

The fourth generation, Fang Kun. Born in the tenth year of the Tongzhi reign of the Qing Dynasty (1872), he was a tribute student during the Guangxu reign. Fang Kun is one of the illustrations in the "Guangxu Lijiang Prefecture Gazetteer". He was the first president of the Lijiang Commercial Promotion Association. He was enthusiastic about local charitable causes. In years of famine, he requested the establishment of a grain price stabilization bureau to help the poor; in years of smallpox outbreaks, he requested the establishment of a cattle rescue bureau to save children. He also raised funds to repair bridges and pave roads to facilitate travel.

During his tenure as president of the Commercial Promotion Association, Fang Kun was commissioned by Xiong Tingquan, the first magistrate of Lijiang during the Republic of China, to organize the March Goods Exchange Fair. The fair has continued to this day and is becoming increasingly successful, playing an important role in the social and economic development of Lijiang and the exchange of goods for people's production and daily life.

Fang Kun, a tribute student, was the head of the Fang family. Together with his brothers, he expanded the Chongxinhe trading company to Kunming, Shanghai, Hong Kong, and even Vietnam, greatly developing the Fang family's business.

During the Jiaqing era of the Qing Dynasty, three generations of the Fang family, who had been engaged in commerce for over 200 years, accumulated wealth through frugality and hard work. Fang Kun personally designed and built the Fang Family Compound (now the former residence of Fang Guoyu). It is now a key cultural relic under provincial protection in Yunnan Province. It is a representative example of Naxi architectural style and the absorption of foreign cultural influences.

The entire compound consists of two courtyard houses and two buildings with three courtyards and a screen wall.

The complex comprises seven large and small courtyards, including a corner tower with a horse-drawn carriage, a courtyard, a garden, and a study, totaling 72 rooms. Nearby are the ruins of former academies, government offices, a Confucian temple, a martial temple, and a Christian church. The century-old Lijiang No. 1 Middle School and the Ancient City No. 1 Middle School are also located nearby. It is a place where diverse cultures converge in the ancient city. It is the best-preserved, most complete, and historically valuable example among the entire ancient city's architectural complex.

Fang Guoyu, who dedicated his life to the study of the history of ethnic minorities in Southwest China and became known as a "giant of Yunnan history and a leading figure in South China," was born into the Fang family in 1903 (the 29th year of the Guangxu Emperor's reign). He was a fifth-generation descendant of the Fang family.

Fang Guoyu graduated from the Department of Chinese Literature at Beijing Normal University (undergraduate) and the Institute of Chinese Studies at Peking University (graduate). He began teaching at Yunnan University in 1936. He served successively as professor and head of the Department of History, and dean of the College of Arts and Law at Yunnan University. He devoted himself to the study of Yunnan's ethnic history and local history, achieving fruitful results and becoming a pioneer and founder in these research fields. His work is included in the Cihai dictionary, earning him renown both domestically and internationally.

He Zhijian, an outstanding Naxi educator who graduated from Beijing University of Law and Politics and served as the director of the Lijiang County Education Bureau during the Republic of China era, believed that the key to education lay in the academic atmosphere and the quality of teachers. He maintained close contact with Fang Guoyu, a Naxi from Lijiang who was then a professor at Southwest Associated University, and recruited a group of outstanding graduates from the university as teachers at Lijiang Middle School. This brought new teaching ideas, methods, and approaches to Lijiang, keeping pace with advanced teaching methods across the country, and achieving very satisfactory results. In all the provincial high school and junior high school graduation examinations, Lijiang Middle School ranked first. All the students graduating in 1941 from the seventh-grade class went on to university. Among them were three students preparing to study in the United States, becoming the "Three Outstanding Students from Lijiang to Study in the US"—He Huizhen, an American Naxi with a doctorate in mineralogy; and Yang Feng, who returned from the US and became...

Fang Baoxian, the president of Sichuan Agricultural College, is hailed as a leading figure in Chinese animal nutrition. He is an American of Naxi ethnicity and holds a doctorate in physics.

Fang Baoxian was born in 1923. He was a sixth-generation descendant of the Fang family in Lijiang. After graduating from Lijiang Middle School, he left home with a thirst for knowledge and walked to Kunming. His perseverance in walking for eighteen days to seek knowledge is evident.

In 1943, Fang Baoxian, an outstanding student at Southwest Associated University, was admitted to the preparatory class for studying in the United States. In 1945, he went to the United States and entered the Ohio State University, Columbia Campus, majoring in physics and mathematics. He then transferred to the Catholic University of Washington to pursue a doctorate in physics, and received his doctorate in 1952.

Subsequently, Fang Baoxian served as the head of the solar cell research department at NASA, a professor at Boston College, and a senior member of the American Physical Society, making significant contributions to the development and research of solar energy worldwide.

In 1971, with the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States, Fang Baoxian remained devoted to his motherland. He returned to China annually to lecture, conduct academic exchanges, and make visits. In 1976, at the invitation of the Chinese Institute of Electronics, during an academic activity, he requested to return home to visit relatives. Jia Qiyun, then Secretary of the Yunnan Provincial Party Committee, instructed: "Fang is a Chinese American, a renowned scientist who has been friendly to me, and has returned to China many times to lecture, introduce advanced foreign technologies, and provide valuable samples and technical data. We cannot refuse his request again." Governor Zhou Xing instructed: "When Mr. Fang returns to Lijiang, please have relevant departments send someone to accompany him and ensure his safety during his journey."

On August 6, 1976, Fang Baoxian returned to Lijiang with his wife and children after more than 30 years away from his hometown. In the 1970s, Fang Baoxian returned to his motherland more than ten times to work. He brought back the knowledge, technology and research materials he had acquired and donated them to the motherland without compensation. In particular, he did not sell his solar energy technology patent to Japan, but dedicated it to the motherland.

Fang Baoxian, deeply attached to Lijiang, wrote in an article: "My research focuses on solar cells, which use solar energy to generate electricity. This is particularly suitable for remote areas. The United Nations Development Programme appointed me as their consultant, allowing me to apply my current technology to my ancestral homeland—I am a true Naxi native." In the summer of 1985, I was honored to have the opportunity to submit a proposal, using Lijiang as a demonstration site, to generate electricity using solar cells produced by a local semiconductor factory. The ultimate goal was to develop the technological capability to produce solar cells in Lijiang. This proposal was accepted by the leaders of Yunnan Province and the Lijiang Naxi Autonomous County. It was hoped that with the support of the Yunnan Provincial Science and Technology Commission, this project could be realized. This year (1986), I continued to express this hope, undertaking a mission for the United Nations Development Programme, and returned to Yunnan, to Lijiang, to work towards the realization of this long-term plan.

After the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States, Fang Baoxian said, "It is my greatest honor to be able to return to my motherland, to see my family in my hometown, and to travel around the country as an expert of the UNTOKEN (United Nations-funded short-term volunteer program to serve the country) and to participate in the research and application of economical solar energy products."

Fang Baoxian collaborated with Nankai University, Beijing University of Technology, Inner Mongolia University, and Yunnan University in China on research in solar energy, ginkgo development, and carbon cages in lignite. He was appointed as a visiting professor at Yunnan University and an honorary professor at Inner Mongolia University and Xi'an Jiaotong University. He dedicated his life to solar energy research, making outstanding contributions to solving humanity's energy problems. In 2008, Baoxian, in his wheelchair, returned to his hometown of Lijiang from the United States for the last time.

"Lijiang is my eternal home!" This will be his final wish.

Affection.

The Naxi people will forever remember him.

Baoxian, "His contributions to solar energy conversion are intertwined with his love for Lijiang, China!"

The Fang family of Lijiang has always regarded its family rules as the "basic law" and family precepts as the core values of the family. Family traditions are the family precepts that descendants uphold through generations. The family culture formed by these rules is the most precious asset of the family, and the construction of family traditions is always given high priority. They emphasize consensus on family traditions, cultivate a clean and upright atmosphere, and gather positive energy for family progress. Even in the sixth generation of the Fang family, they have never separated. They treat their children equally, value education, and prioritize education in their family expenses. They hire tutors for their children's education and strive to ensure they gain knowledge from multiple sources

With the development of the times, family members went to various parts of the country to dedicate themselves to the work of serving the country and the people. At this time, twelve family members are engaged in education, five in medicine, and seven in scientific research. One has obtained a postdoctoral degree, nine have obtained doctoral degrees, and six have obtained master's degrees. There are three professors and six associate professors. They are truly pillars of the nation, the wealth of the people, the pride of the Fang family, and the pride of the Naxi people.

On January 10, 2024, the main journal of Nature published an article reporting a major recent discovery by astronomers: the light variation curves of the new SN2022J1i exhibit a periodic fluctuation of 12.4 days, and the Ha narrow emission lines of its contemporaneous spectrum also show a consistent periodic velocity shift.

This feature, observed for the first time in a superstellar explosion, indicates that the supersource of SN2022J1i is the explosion of a massive star in a binary system

The newly formed compact object provided additional energy for the superstellar explosion by accreting its companion star. Professor Liu Xiaowei, Professor Liu Xiangkun, Associate Researcher Liu Dezi, and Associate Researcher Fang Yuan, members of the Dream Sky Survey Telescope project team at the Southwest China Astronomical Research Institute of Yunnan University, participated in the research. The geographical advantages of the Dream Sky Survey Telescope and the high-precision multi-band photometric data it provided played a crucial role in achieving this significant discovery...

In the article, Fang Yuan is the eighth-generation descendant of the Fang family in Lijiang. The Fang family has produced another young scientific talent, a source of great pride for the family. A scholar who visited the former residence of Fang Guoyu commented: "Visiting Fang Guoyu's former residence felt like stepping onto a platform for family precepts and traditions. The Fang family's tradition of diligence, unity, emphasis on education, and rigor deeply moved me."

May the Fang family of Lijiang, generation after generation, make beneficial achievements for the country and the people.
