

Fang family relatives in Lijiang

Episode 4 (Film Collection)

"The Movie Sequel" Notes

Time may pass, but spring will never fade, elegance will last forever, and laughter will endure. A family tradition of poetry and propriety is passed down through generations. Spring breezes caress the beams, and clouds and rosy hues surround the auspicious purple aura.

In life, fleeting moments captured in photographs are unforgettable. May the spring breeze and rain forever preserve our beautiful images; the experiences of those times, vividly depicted, are filled with color, fragrance, sound, and imagery—water, mountains, objects, and people—wrapped in time, becoming pearls of memory.

In my spare time, I flip through old photos, reminiscing endlessly, and the happiness I once longed for is right beside me. The years my loved ones grew up are filled with boundless hope, and I feel excited to see my family prosper. I feel proud to have nurtured a generation of talented individuals who can contribute to the country and its people.

Sharing life's journey, stories, and memories with loved ones is still full of warmth, fun, and richness!

Through the trials and tribulations of life, the fragrance of love and affection between family members fills the air!

An indelible sentiment needs no elixir of immortality; simply repair the mechanism within the mirror, and its vibrant spirit will be vividly conveyed within a small space. For it possesses the wondrous ability to be in two places at once, needing no embellishment in the painting, it can fully witness three lifetimes.

The only evidence that happiness existed, besides our snow-white hair, is this collection of photographs that still accompany us.

Indeed, compiling these photos into a photo album is a small token of my affection for each of my loved ones.

In February 1978, Fang Guoyu accepted James Lee, a doctoral student from the University of Chicago, to study at Yunnan University. This marked the first time Yunnan University had ever had a foreign student. James Lee was the eldest son of Nobel laureate in Physics, Tsung-Dao Lee. He graduated from the Department of History at Yale University in 1974 with a bachelor's degree. He then worked at the Department of History at the University of Chicago, studying under Professor Ho Ping-ti, researching the social history of Southwest China. Upon Ho Ping-ti's recommendation, he was transferred to Yunnan University by the National Development and Reform Commission.

Professor Fang Baoxian and his wife from Boston College have left Beijing and returned to the United States.

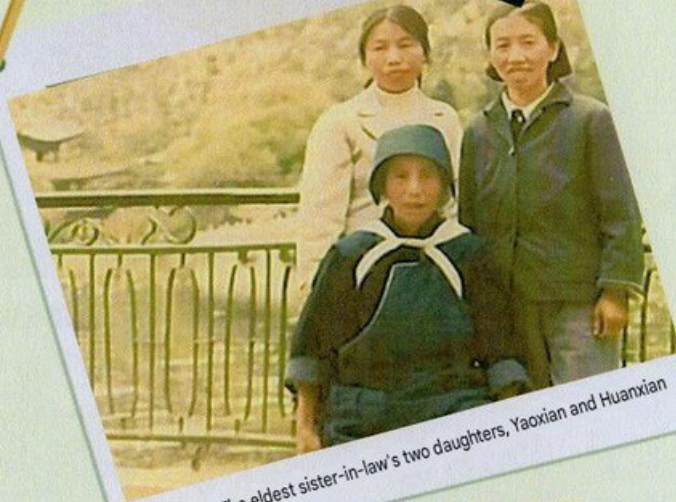

Professor Fang Baoxian of Boston College, accompanied by his wife, Professor Ling Se of Simon College, visited Beijing on June 8 and left for the United States on July 9.

Professor Fang Baoxian and his wife visited relatives in Beijing, Changchun, Harbin, Daqing, Changsha, Shanxi, and Kunming. They toured industrial parks, rural communes, schools, hospitals, and research institutions, visited historical sites, and engaged in academic exchanges.

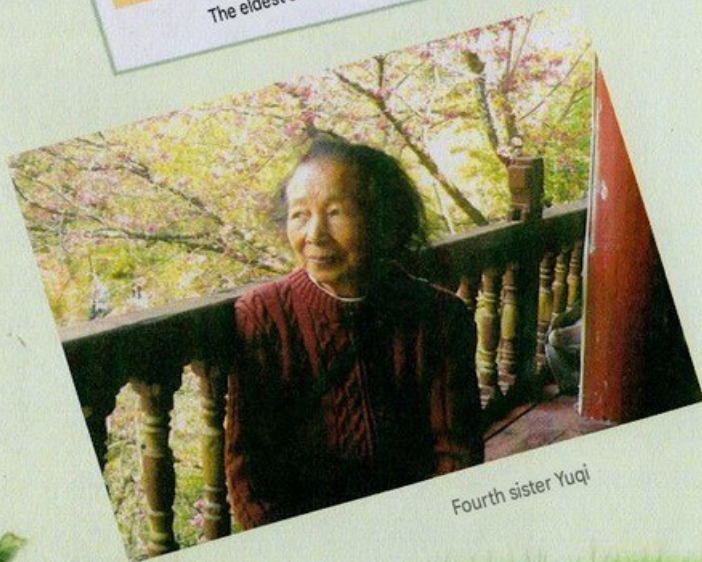

During their stay in Beijing, Zhou Peiyuan, Vice Chairman of the China Association for Science and Technology, met with and hosted a banquet for Professor Fang Baoxian and his wife. They held cordial and friendly talks.

Visiting Fang Guoyu's former residence

"Huanjiang Daily"

When visiting Lijiang Old Town, a World Cultural Heritage site, besides experiencing the picturesque scenery of "willows by every door and flowing water in every house," the magnificent architecture of the Mu Clan Chief's Mansion, and the colorful stone slabs worn smooth and shiny by horses' hooves over hundreds of years, there are some often-forgotten but well worth visiting places, such as key protected residences, caravan stations, and the ruins of old houses. Among them, the former residence of the famous historian Mr. Fang Guoyu, located in Wenzhi Lane, Wuyi Street, Lijiang Old Town, is one of the most representative and culturally rich key protected residences.

Mr. Fang Guoyu is a master who has made great achievements in the fields of Chinese studies, Naxi studies, the holistic view of the Chinese nation, the history of ethnic minorities in Yunnan, the history of Yunnan, and the history of relations between Southwest China and Southeast Asia.

Stepping into Fang Guoyu's former residence is like entering a lecture hall of family precepts and traditions. The Fang family's diligence, unity, emphasis on education, and strict family traditions deeply moved me.

Fang Guoyu's former residence is an ancient house with a history of nearly 200 years, divided into upper and lower courtyards. Standing on the street, one's eyes are drawn to a large arched gate with a fan-shaped upper section, above which hangs a white plaque with green characters that read "Fang Guoyu's Former Residence." Further ahead, a second gate displays a plaque from the Guangxu period of the Qing Dynasty that reads "Shengping" (a title for a descendant of a successful candidate in the imperial examinations). The upper and lower courtyards are connected by stone steps, yet each courtyard forms its own "three courtyards and one screen wall" layout. Behind the main buildings on the east and west sides of each courtyard is a small garden creating a self-contained world. In the central hall of both courtyards stands

A bronze statue of Fang Guoyu. The museum is divided into six exhibition rooms: "The Path of Learning," "Family Care," "Scientific Research Achievements," and "Teaching Achievements." It displays more than 200 photographs of Mr. Fang Guoyu from various periods of his life, as well as more than 100 manuscripts, monographs, writing implements, furniture, and other personal belongings.

According to architectural experts, Fang Guoyu's former residence combines the meticulousness and rigor of Naxi-style architecture with the grand and imposing style of Han architecture, making it a unique architectural masterpiece that integrates Han and Naxi cultures.

People often say that coming to Lijiang without visiting the Old Town is a wasted trip, but I feel that going to the Old Town without visiting Fang Guoyu's former residence is like not having been to the Old Town at all.
